"Lock and key" model. To explain the observed specificity of enzymes, in 1894 Emil Fischer proposed that both the enzyme and the substrate possess specific complementary geometric shapes that fit exactly into one another. This is often referred to as "the lock and key" model.: 8.3.2 This early model explains enzyme specificity, but fails to explain the stabilization of the transition state ...

The millions of different chemical compounds that make up everything on Earth are composed of 118 elements that bond together in different ways. This module explores two common types of chemical bonds: covalent and ionic. The module presents chemical bonding on a sliding scale from pure covalent to pure ionic, depending on differences in the electronegativity of the bonding atoms.
