Just being pedantic about HTTP and streaming -- way back in the dark ages of QuickTime video, there was server push, where the HTTP connection send MJPEG (multiple JPEG images) each as a separate part of a MIME multipart response to the HTTP request. Each JPEG image arrives and replaces the previous in the display.

Limited library? Embedded system? Need as much performance as possible? No problem! As demonstrated in this answer to this question, you can use assembly language to wrap function which do not accept VA_LIST into ones that do, implementing your own vprintf at little cost!. While this will work, and almost certainly result in the performance as well as abstraction you want, I would just ...
